

To the best of our knowledge, all states that actively regulate mixed martial arts require licensure as a condition for competition. All states required bloodwork and most require an annual physical and the results of a vision examination.